"BUFFALO BILL"

GEN. W. F. CODY, the most popular man in the country, writes his opinion of the most popular remedy.

Encino, June 24, 88

Dr. R. V. Pierce

Buffalo N.Y.

Dear Doctor

I have used your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" with perfect success and satisfaction. I have found them a good blood purifier, and a prompt and reliable cure for Constipation. I have also used your "Favorite Prescription" with excellent results, and can recommend it to the public as a reliable remedy for the diseases for which it is recommended.

Yours truly,

REFUSE OF SENATORS TEN SAY OR ANOTHER CASE IN THE ARTS.

Commissioner Miller Says It Cannot Be Done Without Opening the Door to Fraud Unless the Revenue Force Is Greatly Increased—Chairman Mills Gives His Reasons for Opposing the Amendment—Interviews with Other Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 30.—[Special.]—Commissioner of Revenue Miller has a theory of his own by which quarter cent on the cigarette can be made free and there is no reason why the government revenue can't come to greatly added to. How large the increase would have to be it is impossible to tell; it might be 100 per cent, it might be 500 per cent, it might be even greater than that. It is impossible to tell how much should be made solely for commercial purposes, but it is estimated that the consumption last year was 1,000,000 gallons, on which the tax amounted to $1,000,000. If the tax should be doubled it is certain that the consumption would be largely increased, as in many states to drink almost brandy comes, such as gin, flannery, for instance, there would be great activity, an plenty of men would be here that their profits would be large if they did not have to pay the tax. It seems this is all nonsense, but the problem of the tax would undoubtedly lead to new ones going into business. In this way the revenue would be increased and the expense of collecting increased.

"Why would your suggestion be increased?"

"We would only do business in this way. One would be to cause to exercise all supervision over the alcohol the moment it left the receiving vessels, and that would be equal to arriving taxes. It is true the consumer or manufacturer could be tended, but other would find means to. A man in Chicago, for example, might want tax free, of alcohol, presumably for medicinal purposes, and yet half of it might be used as a beverage and the most exercise on check. Of course by would be known, but the trend would be of little use, and it would be the same with the manufacturer. Then there would be the opening wedge to abolishing the whole internal revenue system, and that would be the beginning of the end of the whole system, as I have already said."

WASHINGTON'S ANCESTRY

THE CELEBRATION OF THE FAMOUS OF HIS ANCESTORS.

Interesting Gather in the Old Parish Church at Brigham in Northamptonshire—The Delights of Ever Pastime—Care of Arms on the Tomb of Washington's Great-Great-Grandfather Which Suggested the Stars and Stripes—Sir John "the Emigrant."

LONDON, June 30.—[Special Correspondence.]—Notwithstanding the scarcity of "visitors and money," in connection with some of the most stirring years of English history, in the town some of the other anniversaries are military movements in the United Kingdom, and is a rare training ground for generals of distinction. Northampton town with considerable pride of her own can interesting history in connection with that of the ruling Empire of England, met with no less degree of self-congratulation that she can claim to have been the home and birthplace of ancestors of the Franklin and Washington families, and especially that of the latter great fighter, "the colonist," who went to America to become the proprietor of the Fairfax of the County Westmoreland. Washington's great-grandfather, Lawrence, was baptized in the church at Brigham, about seven miles distant from the town of Northampton, and on the south side are the only "relics" which have suggested the Stars and Stripes of the American republic." At the Lawrence's are also who emigrated to America about 1657, and his son settled at Bridge's Creek, where the great George was born in 1732. The grandfather of the Lawrence who was at Brigham was Sir John of Northampton, 1600 and 1660, and had granted him by Henry VIII. the lands of Sulgrave, which became the chief family residence and the manor house, which still remains though not a modern farm-house, a relic in the midst of Sulgrave still retains the arms and relics of one of the family, and within a few years the deeds of the Washington were sent to Washington's group—about they are to be seen at Sulgrave on the stone window. In a chapel for commission from the missing Parish of Warton saving the family of Lord Sulgrave, the great ancestors of Washington, and Prime Minister during the American War, and, more interesting still, the middle of the Parish family is not an acre away from the home of Washington's ancestors. Such is Washington's grandfather was a thirteenth and eldest grandson of Brigham—a little village about two miles south the Town of Northampton—and was born in 1602. He was the eldest son of Sir John Washington, of Warton, in the county of Lancaster, and was baptized in the parish church of Brigham on the 24th of April, 1602. He married Amphillis, daughter of John Twigden, of Purleigh, in Essex, and died in 1677, and was buried in the chancel of the church of Brigham, where a brass plate to his memory still remains. He was the eldest of a family of seven sons and two daughters, of whom the eldest son, John, emigrated to Virginia, and was the great-grandfather of George Washington, the first President of the United States. The second son, Lawrence, was baptized at Brigham on the 12th of October, 1635, and was buried there on the 14th of December, 1698. He was a student of Oxford University, and was admitted a member of Brasenose College on the 17th of March, 1653, and took the degree of B.A. on the 27th of October, 1654, and that of M.A. on the 15th of June, 1657. He was elected a Fellow of Brasenose College in 1658, and was appointed Rector of Purleigh, in Essex, in 1660, and was also appointed Chaplain to Archbishop Sheldon. He was ejected from his living by the Act of Uniformity in 1662, and retired to Northampton, where he resided in the house of Mr. Isham, in All Saints' parish, and died in 1677, and was buried in the chancel of the church of Brigham, where a brass plate to his memory still remains. ARCTIC DELICACIES OVER WHICH OUR STARS AND STRIPES FLOURISH.

Fourth of July in the Far North, with Icebergs and Green Water—How to Save Your Provisions at Seventy Degrees North—Cheerful Reports from the Eastern Steamers—Struggling Against the Ice.

Five people will remember, perhaps while the Society season lasts, that cod liver oleosa is the Royal Canadian Yukon expedition of which Lieut. Lockwood is in command, and which is to start to-day to avoid the ice-floes encountered with their excellent steamer, the Neptune, in the Straits of Belle Isle. It was an unfortunate experience, that of the Greely party, the rescuing of which cost the country $1,000,000, and the sacrifice of many lives, and the Government is determined that no such disaster shall befall the present party. The Neptune has been fitted out with every possible appliance for the safety and comfort of the explorers, and the latest improvements in the way of provisions have been added to the stores. Among the latter are a number of cans of Liebig's Extract of Beef, which, it is claimed, will keep in any climate, and which will be found invaluable in the Arctic regions. Lieut. Lockwood has written to the Liebig Company, saying that he will test the value of the extract in the Arctic regions, and will report the result of his experiments after his return. The Liebig Company has also received letters from Lieut. Peary, who is now in the Arctic regions, and who has been using the extract for some time. He says that he finds it very valuable, and that he has been using it in the Arctic regions for some time. He says that he finds it very valuable, and that he has been using it in the Arctic regions for some time. He says that he finds it very valuable, and that he has been using it in the Arctic regions for some time.

SUNDAY, JULY 2, 1893.

CHICAGO AS A STRIKE RANGE.

For the fortieth time does The Tribune exercise the American privilege that the advent of the first day of July marks the anniversary of Chicago's extraction to the citizenship of this country as the great grain of successful sand. Its claims to the distinctive appellation have been so generally and generously conceded that it seems hardly necessary to state them. Its civic individuality, its rise for accomplishing great results, its dynamic equipment of steam railways, its far-reaching clang and quick heat impulse, its fire, storms, tornadoes, floods, disease, and general assortment. The Wyoming (N. Y.) Enlightener rises up to the press to the assertion that all other communities are handicapped in a commercial race." All of these parochial pets in their graves of the dalliances could, but a word has been said to advance either one of this splendid structure.

This is all the more remarkable in that the great audience, numbering a round ten thousand souls, only saw a fifth of the temporary and incomplete form, and could have but little idea of what it will be when it is finished and dedicated to its legitimate purposes. That work will now go on happily, and even those to Freemasonry must be subjected the assembly building will be in readiness for its initial exhibition. When completed it will be the most imposing auditorium in the United States, one of the finest extant in the world, and one admired to such an enduring manner that, barring the calamity of cyclone or earthquake, upheaval storm or structure ends by human hands can shake it, it will endure for countless ages after its projectors have ceased to be. A monument to their skill, energies and enterprise, and one of the great attractions of the country to eulogize from home and abroad.

The outer shell of the great two-story structure will be devoted to hotel purposes, every room an outside one, and to stores and offices, thus abutting to the system of a great hotel edifice with its and them. From its centre a massive square tower will rise 250 feet, with views to its top, to commit affection to the elaborate vanity for the use of the signal service. It will accommodate a single ticket room of the lake and rear harbor and of the country for miles around, and will have the breath of pure air and cool breeze. Within the shell will be the great auditorium, with its seating capacity of 15,000 persons, and so arranged that it can be used for two, and so built as to accommodate the smaller number which would be likely to attend concerts, plays, concerts, or operas by dividing off the upper galleries, and will preserving the space and floor of the body of the hall. The auditorium proper is to seating on the ground floor, the stalls, and the public centre and continuous layers, its acoustic qualities, its convenience, and will challenge safety and comfort-room to the world. For a great orchestra or a mass chorus the effect will be superb, and in high stage will effect of the most artistic display of stability, security, permanence, and accessories of all kinds, for the stage and opera. Safety and convenience also have been considered in the construction. There is not a stick of timber in all this vast structure—nothing that can be set to materials, and every one unless, beam, and support has been tested to destruction, so that it shall not be exposed by human hands. Even the gymnasium, for tots, is architectural design a whole and every one beginning to the other. In every during the night within will be warming, with gas and lighted, and every citizen of Chicago will feel as if he had a personal share of ownership in it and impatiently await the time when, with fitting ceremonial and pageantry, it will be thrown open to the use of the unincumbered loyalty of all. The great convention and regular patronage of the country and the most elegant home of opera and drama in the world.

SUGGESTION OF RAILWAY COMMISSION.

Commissioner Smith reserves the grateful thanks of the people of Chicago for having framed and pertinently called the attention of the Canadian Canal to the necessity of securing proper protection for the and property of the railroad employes in accordance with the laws of the State and the letter and spirit of the national statutes. Surely it seems time that the public journals are not called upon to chronicle the slaughter of railroad employes, including citizens at every one or more of these scourges to the account of the lack of protection or precaution employed. The railroad corporations have equal responsibility in the duty to their employes, but the managers of those corporations have become either engineers or firemen, or have passed through the various grades of service to the position they occupy. They learned but the expense of guard-gates and such other protective appliances as were proposed at this point or that, and were considered to their boards of directors in New York City. Certainly enough, the directors seem to have always turned their backs on the

The State law provides that the Council may require "railroad companies to every railroad in railroad crossings of streets and provide protection against injury to persons or property by the use of locomotives." The action of the railroad companies in which Commissioner Smith refers has been in connection to the Council's Railroad Ordinance, which was passed by the Council and approved by the Mayor. The ordinance provides that the railroads to provide flagmen, or gates, or gates, or protection, and watchmen at grade crossings, or other protection, in the discretion of Railway," and that the Council may by resolution or ordinance direct and direct the location of gates, gatemen, or other protection, or the removal of railway," and that the Council may by resolution or ordinance and direct that such railroad company shall, within a certain time, to be fixed by the Board of Commissioners of Public Works, such construct, and maintain a sufficient gate or gates at such crossings. . . . and it shall be the duty of said Commissioner of Public Works to serve upon said railroad company notice to such effect, and thereupon said railroad company shall forthwith comply with the requirements of said notice."

THE CHICAGO SYNDICATE.

It may be considered strange and unfitting in the county of Chicago for many years to have been surprising at the magnificence of its enterprises that the late Mr. Henry A. Rust should have an estate of nearly $4,000,000, carefully derived by the means of it to a combination of persons and in connection with influences and endowments, which, in principal with influences and, were not considered legal or moral. Mr. Rust was a man of great energy and ability, and his estate was the result of his own efforts. He was not a speculator, but a man of business, and his estate was the result of his own efforts. CHICAGO REAL ESTATE.

THE BOOK FOR WHICH YOUR LETTER HAS NOT ANSWERED.

Business Contents that It Is to Be an "Off" Year—Tax Talks about the Outlook—The Activity along Wabash Avenue — Evidence of the Theory Advanced — The Trade in Small Lots—What the Architects Are Doing—Prices.

Many of the real estate letters are getting tired of waiting for something to turn up and have given over producing that good luck will come to attend this business. They do, however, have hopes that the July fundamentals of interest and dividends will increase the demand for property. They are not much encouraged in this line from the fact that interest and other securities are to declare. It is not reasonable to expect that there will be much of a rush into railroad stocks, considering the present condition of railroad affairs, and even the bonds are unsettling. Where, then, will the surplus of these funds show the require- ments of current expenses be placed? The best statements now are that there is an unusual drift of money toward the strong banks, but wealthy people desire to have their capital pay bills, and if really loans can not be accommodated to them they will invest in it. A considerable share of this July money may therefore be expected to go into real estate. The buyers of land are not actively in any hurry to act, but it may be some weeks before any effect is seen from these improvements. But if buyers can not act, no one knows. They are not like the seller on the Board of Trade who is not satisfied unless he can get some movement every day or other. Some properties in Chicago are generally moving good and sound properties are not stocking, and in many instances they are positively active. Chicago real estate moves slowly in quantities. The market being thin, a few sales have a wide influence on the city. And since business is not launched simply from the fact of the large transactions of the city, but grow together to act in some way for one to the next, and the properties of some buyers to suddenly buyers to accommodate the class of property one pur- chases, these sales which are constantly occurring, most gain strength hours, and a business like some- where better days than yesterday. There is not a single item from the Chief Source of encouraging promise and arresting to prove successful. Business investment factors are mak- ing more and more favorable, but to get money market should be in a hurry at 6 per cent on the best outside properties.

AUTHENTIC TRANSFERS.

The following instruments were filed for record during the month of June:

[illegible]

A WORD TO THE WISE.

One of the largest of the banks, who not only loans money on real estate, but also does a great deal of collecting for estates and corporations, expresses the opinion that there will be no occasion for undue alarm over the condition of the money market. At least not before the fall crops are moved. In fact, the present shows to be the best time of the year to borrow money, as the banks are then overflowing with funds. Many of the great institutions in the country will be in the market for loans, and it is the policy of the banks to encourage borrowers at this time of the year, so as to be able to keep their money employed during the dull season. Borrowers will find that the banks will be willing to make loans at a low rate of interest, and will not require the payment of the principal for a long time. Those who have money to loan on real estate security will do well to look around for good investments at this time, as they will be able to get better rates than they will be able to get later in the year. Those who have money to loan on real estate security will do well to look around for good investments at this time, as they will be able to get better rates than they will be able to get later in the year.

CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS.

The following petitions were filed in the Superior Court during the week ending June 30:

[illegible]

THE VALUE OF VACANT LOTS.

It has been asserted for many years past that the increase in vacant land in the suburbs has been astounding, and it would seem that from year to year the amount of land in vacant lots in the suburbs would increase. But the fact is that the amount of vacant land in the suburbs has been decreasing, and it would seem that the amount of land in vacant lots in the suburbs would increase. A VICTORY FOR HENNEPIN.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL AS FAR AS THE HOUSE IS CONCERNED.

The Committee of the Whole on Appropriations in the River and Harbor Bill Wrangle Over Striking Out the Necessary Words to Make the Usual Annual Items—Speeches—Cox Wants Money Spent on Spoon River—Other Pointed Remarks—Mr. Hennepin's Work on Illinois River and Harbor Matters.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 30.—[Special.]—To the Senate today, while the River and Harbor bill was under discussion, the La Salle and Hennepin Canals were given rank as great lines of commercial importance. An amendment had been tendered to the bill for the survey of a ship canal from La Salle to Lake Michigan at a point near Chicago, the need to have a width of not less than 160 feet and a depth to be fourteen feet deep. Mr. Hoar opposed the amendment. He said that such a canal might cause the level of the lake to be lowered, and if that was the case it would be unnecessary money to pursue. Besides, he did not see the advantage of the canal, as the principal lake owners to be to provide an outlet for the sewage of Chicago, and to his opinion Chicago should provide for that herself and not tax the people of the country.

Senator Paddock advocated the scheme. He pointed out that at the last session appropriations were made for from a survey. If the army engineers who were employed to make the survey were to pronounce that the canal was practicable there it would be abandoned. But when they refused to look into whether the canal could be constructed and gave other particulars which could only be obtained by having a survey made, the great subscription journals in Boston or Liverpool or other places ridiculed the Senate or Congress for asking for the survey. Mr. Paddock said that he had not the slightest interest in the matter, but he was anxious that the Senate should not be ridiculed.

Senator Cullom followed, bluntly disputed with the La Salle and the Hennepin Canals. He called attention to the fact that the survey of the Hennepin Canal had already been made, the estimated cost having been $1,911,000, and that the present appropriation was not for a "survey," but for a "canal." "I have no objection," he said, "to the survey, but I object to appropriating money for a canal which is practically completed, and I shall continue to do so as long as I am in the Senate." The proper thing to do was to introduce a separate bill for each canal project, so that it might be intelligently discussed on its merits. By giving appropriations for canals in a river and harbor bill many Senators voted for them, although they did not always believe that they were entitled to as much as they were entitled to on which they were interested, they raised no opposition to the objectionable items.

Another objection that Mr. Harrison had to the present shape was to prevent such a canal scheme as that between Chicago and the Mississippi River at the mouth of Rock River from being agreed to after a person to the Union that it would divert the investment absolutely to the destruction of the canal. Senators Cullom and Hoar denied that it did so, and Senator Sherman refused to commit himself one way or the other.

These amendments were agreed to, while the Senate was in Committee of the Whole, and when the bill comes before the Senate proper a vote will be demanded. While the amendments may be adopted by a vote in favor of the survey.

The following amendments among others to the River and Harbor bill were agreed to: Inserting an item of $10,000 for the Missouri River above St. Anthony's Falls; the appropriation of $50,000 for the improvement of the Upper Mississippi River; the appropriation of $5,000 for rivers and harbors and to begin about 6 propositions which were intended to secure the great lake system with the Mississippi River; to improve the Des Moines River, in the State of Iowa, from Keokuk to the mouth, and $7 thousand from the Illinois River to the mouth of the Illinois River; to improve the Illinois River from the mouth of the Illinois River to the mouth of the Upper Mississippi River; to improve the Illinois River from the mouth of the Illinois River to the mouth of the Upper Mississippi River; to improve the Illinois River from the mouth of the Illinois River to the mouth of the Upper Mississippi River.

The amendment directing the Secretary of War to locate a road from the Illinois River at Hennepin to the Mississippi River at the mouth of Rock River was then agreed to, after a protest by Mr. Cox that it would divert the investment absolutely to the destruction of the canal. Senators Cullom and Hoar denied that it did so, and Senator Sherman refused to commit himself one way or the other.

NEW AND STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS IN MURDER OF MYSTERY.

Detective Thiek Has Quite a Couple of Points That Look Interesting—A Suit of the Well-Side Millionaire—A New Story of a Dark Water Spring Confronts the Executors of the Crane Estate—Chicago Tribune Flood Sponsors.

EVANSTON, Ill., June 30.—[Special.]—Henry Harrison Snell today took into custody a man named Jack Dowling at the request of a Chicago detective, who claimed that Dowling answered accurately the description of a man who he thought drove automobile about the Snell man. Dowling admit who he was taken and they took him to evanston, but did not say anything of what. He has been locked up all day and as yet has been able to see him. The officers are secret and evidently do not know what to make of Dowling. It was also intimated, however, that he or somebody going to that town and answering that description a carriage in Chicago, Irving, and several other facts, and that large reports are offered. The officers claim the detective is working on the right man, and that others will be put in custody to identify him. No matter how long Dowling remains locked up there he will not have to appear in court. He will be held only as a witness, and will be released as soon as he has told all he knows about the case.

It is reported that James Wilson, alias Billy Wise, has been arrested in Kansas City, Mo., by private detective agencies. The description that has been sent to some that Wise was employed by the Snell people, and that he would leave the city. Wise was also said to be a friend of Theiss and the ultimate solution of the mystery. Theiss is said to have frequented the neighborhood of the Snell residence during the week previous to the murder. Report says that Theiss left St. Louis on shortly after the murder was committed. Detective Farrell of the city force went to that city and arrested an unknown man. He was taken to Chicago, but was released on insufficient evidence.

No one has been found for extradition in the case of Mrs. Snell's brother, Mr. Wise.

I am for anything else that I know of.

Do you know what he has been arrested for?

I do not. I don't know how that he has been arrested.

MRS. BLAINE OUT AND CHILDREN DECORATED.

Some Points Upon the Political Conflict of the Week Between Count de Lesseps and the Confederate in the Panama Canal Loan and the Citizens Scheme of the Project—American Appreciation of an Exemption for a Frenchman—Count Has Come Around.

(Copyright, 1884, by the Associated Press.)

LONDON, June 21.—I have learned the outcast story of Mr. Blaine's position concerning the Presidential nomine. When he left for Europe last year it was for the distinct and avowed purpose of avoiding even the appearance of seeking a support for the nomination. To a few confidential friends he said before his departure that he would not consent to reject again seeing he was united with general unanimity. In this he had been quite chief of his party, and had, in his opinion, brought it together and developed its issue upon which the campaign is to be fought. If this year all of the candidates had consented Mr. Blaine's supporters, as they would undoubtedly have been able to accept and to make unanimous. Such action the name to Europe but to half dozen times more to the close confidence to the 3rd, and save the head to have made up the mind to retire. It was not, however, until this had ended in Chairman, Commissioner for Harvey, counsel for Harvey, and John for Jones that the Kid Pierson letter was written and the posture of withdrawing were. Mr. Blaine felt sure that it would look best a suggestion of his dignity to again make a second for the nomination against his wishes. He did not doubt then, but what his friends would be willing to accept the nomination if it had been tendered to them by the Republican National Convention, but he felt sure that the nomination would not be tendered to him. He was sure that the Republican party would not be willing to accept him as a candidate after the course which he had taken in the Garfield matter. He was willing to sacrifice himself for the good of the party, but he was not willing to be sacrificed by the party. He felt sure that the nomination would not be tendered to him, and he was not willing to be a candidate for the nomination unless it was tendered to him

MOTHERS AND MANNERS.

THEIR OMISSION IS GRAVE, BUT NOT A CAUSE OF CONFUSION.

Young Folks Are "Fine" and Polite, but the Disrespect to Their Elders and the Latter Count It—Contempt Encouraged by Parents—Who Is to Be Blamed If Not the Mother?

Some Club—There is an amusing fad for the American young folk just about the highest in the world. Costly possessions, gilt-edged to wear and to "compete."

But though their cleverness is remarkable, it must be admitted that many of them are anything but patterns of gentility, particularly in the domestic circle.

Indeed, for disrespect to parents and elders generally, one young person, or at least many of them, are a byword and a reproach. It is a wonderful fact "why" but some children's manners are at a low ebb in this country.

For the most of it is to that Times Square promenade corner their priceless of impudence and ordinance with such a good grace.

They actually patronize their parents.

What is more, their parents "stand it."

And that is where all the trouble lies—with the parents. And especially with the mothers of those youth. Where is your father? Why, he's down town, mother, or at the business office, or somewhere. Always the same answer.

Mother, for the most part, is the one who is responsible for the manners of her children. She is the one who has the time to devote to the training of her children. She is the one who has the time to devote to the training of her children. She is the one who has the time to devote to the training of her children.

"Let me see your face," said Lamar Dunbar, when she had finished.

With trepidation the girl presented a pretty face and blue eyes, whose lids were cast from view. Recently her confidence had been so much taken away that she could not look him in the eyes. Nervously her fingers played with the corners of her apron. Dunbar was a young physician, and he had been called in professionally to attend Mary Dunbar, the young girl's mother, who was ill with typhoid fever. During the last week she had been delirious, and Mary had been constantly at her bedside. Dunbar had seen her almost every day, and during the time he had come to look upon her as a child. Now she was a young woman, and he looked upon her with different eyes.

"Let me see your face," he said again, gently.

Slowly she raised her head.

"Why, Mary, what's the matter?" he asked, in surprise, as he saw her tear-stained face.

"Oh, Lamar, I'm so unhappy!" she cried, and burst into tears.

A SUBJECT OF THE CZAR.

A Dutiful Picture by Stanley Life at Home and at War.

The Autobiography of Alexander Tvanitzin—An Interesting Volume Forthcoming from Within the Experiences, the Hopes and Disappointments, the Rewards and Indignities of a Russian Citizen and Soldier—The Current Side-Shows of Petersburg—Sketches of Nobility.

It is not an easy matter to write a book that will be more certainly sure to fail than the autobiography that has just come to us from that country—"At Home and in War, 1860-1880. Reminiscences and Anecdotes," by Alexander Tvanitzin. (Translated by Isabel F. Hapgood. (New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

To get a true flow of a people it is necessary to look at them if possible from the native point of view, for nothing is apt to be so misleading as the description given us by the correspondents of foreign papers, who in not one in a thousand cases, and in that only now and then, ever get to the native point of view. We have had for centuries here descriptions of and accompanied by our English and American writers and travelers of our customs. How much more profitable it is, therefore, that Russia, which is indeed subject of by the researches of Europe, should suffer from being viewed through the ancient glasses of ignorance and prejudice!

To understand a people we must identify ourselves to some extent with their modes of thought and habits of living, and this cannot be better done than by reading such books and biography. The future of Russia is to fulfill a transcript of its past. It is to remain superior as nations go, or, if it is to be lowered in the scale of humanity, although and such success that it is hardly to be interesting.

Let one take the book as authentic record of "At Home and in War," and follow the career of the narrator from the nursery to the primary school, from the country home among the serfs to the military college at St. Petersburg; there to see many events of the Russia, through the battle of Leipzig, to the conquest of Paris, over the graves of the Balkans, to the gates of Constantinople; and if we reading the narrative ever and to see more with the treatment of a Russian gentleman and officer by the Russian government and agents, still a glowing benefit. In such a semi-barbarous state of society, having all the appearance and cruelty of feudalism without the poetry and chivalry of the days of romance, the development of the inner man is a very interesting study. The author has a good position in the world, and is able to give us a fair picture of the life of the upper classes, but he has also had the opportunity of seeing much of the lower classes, and of sympathizing with them. He was in the Crimea during the war, and was present at the siege of Sebastopol, and was wounded in the battle of Inkerman. ROYAL LADIES WHO WRITE.

SOVEREIGNS AND SOCIAL QUEENS AND PRINCESSES.

Queen Elizabeth of Roumania as We Future, and Public Lectures—They Prove Her Not the Belief that She Had a Great Time, but a Cool Little Digger the Station—Carl's Star Queen Also Wields the Pen—Favorite Ideas Writing.

The Queens and Princesses, Kings and Queens of Europe are not alone by any means. Most of them have been highly cultured professions, or talk, to one of exactly they may not be entirely grounded upon the art the should seem. The late Queen of the wife Princess of Saxony amounts to rose upon $10,000.00 a year, a good part of which, the world may be happy to know, goes towards paying present king. Although a goodly number of reigning monarchs dabble in literature, not necessarily to good ends, it is not probable that they ever reap profits, though Queen Victoria and the Queen of Roumania should receive a goodly income from their works, unless they have been unfortunate enough to fall into the hands of evident publishers like Messrs. of the Harpers, or particularly assertive to Lieut. Hazard's last novel. The Czarin de Paris has on account her husband's refusal to allow the civil War to pecuniary worry properly from the title sense to its acquisition to profit and fame. The Empress Eugenie of America took on the Empire that we will eventually rule over way to remunerative, but it is difficult to see that more would not be left after he has paid all the dismembered others.

But we have to deal with no fewer half of the royal sorts in the prices, and herein we find a goodly number of Princesses, princes and sovereigns, who seek to reward them if to secure many money prizes. The majority, however, are content to be high personages of interests and art, and no such position to great good. Not a few whom they cultivate art it is the manner. So Queen Isabella of Spain is an accomplished lexicographer and at one time went to sing and paint, sometimes got the better of both. The Queen of Belgium is fond of music, and by her efforts has contributed much to the progress made in theater art in Belgium of late years. The Ex-Empress Victoria of Germany has of late let fall hints intended to get next her from death to actresses artistic life in Germany, and such, according to the latest news, it has been. Empress Elizabeth of Austria was first also in the author of a good translation, which appeared in 1881 and passed some into 12 German editions and Hungarian, both the Magyar and the Church. The Empress is still the respectful Empress Frederick of the Council of King Victor Emanuel in 1865 and 1866 and dated from 1870 to 1878. This interesting piece of information has within the last few months been communicated by the executor of the estate to the Librarian of the University of Gottingen.

Among all the Sovereign Ladies, Queen the best known to Queen Elizabeth of Roumania. Under the pseudonym of "Carmen Sylva" she has published a goodly number of original, chiefly German and written of her adopted country and the court and the people, and has also written large volumes of poems. Her most popular book is "Pilgrim Thoughts," which was published some years ago by Hon. Adam, the proprietorship of the Theatre Cluny in Paris, to which she has since contributed not a few pieces. Among her translations, "Wanted to Pelleas and Melisande" from the French of Maeterlinck, and with which some years ago a little London stage sensation was created. It is a very intelligent woman about whom nothing can be said without there being something to be written to the next.

The Queen is a good plucky sailor, a fine shot and an excellent rider. In 1886 she was elected by the Scientific Bureau of Public Instruction of the world Hugo to write a book which could be taken to the public schools of Roumania. It was issued by the command of the children. In this manner the Queen has a writing fad, and wrote the pretty tales and legends from the mountains and valleys of the Carpathians, entitled "The Carmen Sylva's Book." Of course the Queen has written for many. She is also a novelist that is true fiction, and is not to be an admirer of good novels, that of her own is entitled "Thorn in Flowers," which is then translated.

Queen enough to have her to the ground. Then do her duty to overcome anything, and through, for life, the throne, are highly gratified.

THE EXHIBITION AWARDS.

FRENCH GIVEN FIFTEEN TIMES AND PRIZES NOT YET READY.

Rather Unsatisfactory Ending of the Fine Exhibition at the Art Institute—Mistaken to Be Avoided in Future—Interpretation of Lowest Fineness Works Inferior to Competing Artists—Another Opportunity for the Carping Fool to Come at Chicago.

The award of prizes at the Art Institute has naturally caused considerable comparative comment among those who have enough interest in the subject to have any opinion. Mr. J. W. Ellsworth, one of the trustees, has offered an annual prize of $500 for the best picture in oil painted by an American in America, the award to be made only once to the successful competitor and the picture to be one not previously exhibited in Chicago or the vicinity. This was supplemented by a prize of $200 by the Art Institute for the next best picture painted by an American anywhere, the other conditions being identical with those of the Ellsworth prize. There was great difficulty in selecting many of the pictures, owing to counter claims and their many merits and lack. Whatever the representation of American canvas has been shown by previous art prizes, Mr. Ellsworth, honorable and profoundly sincere, assumed a penalty for the very many of the best pictures in the spring exhibition at the Academy in New York, and only upon the assurance that a certain number would be permanent were the regulations of the Chicago exhibition filed. The exhibition, under the circumstances, was a daring experiment. If it failed at the outset the effects of the failure would remain for years. It was apparent that it meant to satisfy a sole exhibit, that no same means to be the rule to retain, or the chances of the artists who have not hitherto been fortunate enough to secure recognition appeared. Either because the number and the particular quality of the pictures for sale would not satisfy the demands of the exhibitors, or for some other reason hard to discover, the rule does appear to have been enforced, chiefly those of the exhibitors of Mr. Ellsworth himself and Mr. T. B. Clarke of New York, to whose purchase art is largely indebted for such artistic good as the exhibition may contain. Of the pictures that were private property many are not for exhibition with them which were put on the artist hands, the latter would have an equal chance to the prize competition.

The figures are there to confirm the opinion of whoever may be reasonably critical for the intervention of personal interest in a large measure of the judgment. Mr. Ellsworth openly says in offering the prize that it is "hoped to see that the best principles of judging were not observed in determining the awards of the exhibition. If American artists are to send pictures and have the prizes awarded representing the work of the leaders of the year or of the period immediately preceding the exhibition, they cannot be expected to look with complacency upon a prize and testimonial system of judgment which presents no other aim to exhibitors than a lottery." The University of Chicago is to be congratulated on having selected as the judges to whom the decision of the prize is to be left to competitors must be content to abide by the fact of the final action as the result of the first Chicago exhibition of American art.

The judges appointed to determine the persons to whom the prizes were to be awarded were Mr. Lorado Taft, Mr. J. Wilmarth Evans, and Mr. Ernest Knaufft. Mr. Taft is a sculptor, and his professional knowledge of being influenced by any party or personal considerations. The appointment of Mr. Clarke was of course an error on the face when he was selected to help pictures to be included in the exhibition. This one thing removed from the competition to select from the judgment committee. In taking the latter step he displayed delicacy to the very report that was so quite fair to the artists whose pictures were on the walls and to whom the prizes were open. Probably none of those who protested would have been so at all. What of every ten artists would have felt that an opinion was influenced back by the people would be liable to the accusation of Mr. Clarke upon the judgment committee.

In the withdrawal of Mr. Clarke's pictures the committee was certainly exonerated. It was doubtless proper that none of its members for those reasons would have opened the first prize. It is a beautiful picture despite the flaunt of the figures in the foreground, and there are those who think it should have received the prize. That was a good reason for leaving it out. Another of the just that disqualified artists who are entitled to most praise in the Chicago exhibition will perhaps call for the same action by others as in point. It is also believed that because Mr. Taft had painted the portrait of Lord Kitchener's wife at the opening of the exhibition he would not be entitled to select the prize to the disappointment might appear unjust. This paper is not inclined to a hypercritical consideration. The only criticism of the affair is that artists will most likely hesitate to Chicago in future if this decision is to be followed.

The committee of the Art Institute stated yesterday that the awards would be announced Saturday, during recess of which the time from the opening was to the private that the committee was to withdraw the pictures of Mr. Clarke. It was stated that the committee had not yet decided whether
